Williamson, T. M., Rash, J. A., Campbell, T. S., & Mothersill, K. Ethical considerations in assessment and behavioral treatment of obesity: Issues and practice implications for clinical health psychologists. Professional Psychology: Research and Practice, Jul 01, 2019,

The obesity epidemic in the United States and Canada has been accompanied by an increased demand on behavioral health specialists to provide comprehensive behavior therapy for weight loss (BTWL) to individuals with obesity. Clinical health psychologists are optimally positioned to deliver BTWL because of their advanced competencies in multimodal assessment, training in evidence-based methods of behavior change, and proficiencies in interdisciplinary collaboration. Although published guidelines provide recommendations for optimal design and delivery of BTWL (e.g., behavior modification, cognitive restructuring, and mindfulness practice; group-based vs. individual therapy), guidelines on ethical issues that may arise during assessment and treatment remain conspicuously absent.

RESOURCES

Consortium for the Advancement of Research Methods and Analysis Membership

The Department has purchased a subscription to CARMA (Consortium for the Advancement of Research Methods and Analysis). This allows us access to discounts to their short in-person courses (next round is in January and covers courses such as “Introduction to R and Data Analysis” and “Introduction to Multilevel Analysis with R”). Moreover, there is a gigantic video library of leading world experts on virtually any topic you can ever imagine in methods and statistics (e.g., meta-analysis, robust regression, item response theory). Finally, they continue to add to these videos by producing a monthly live webcast that can be accessed here:

SCHOOL PSYCHOLOGISTS SUPPORT STUDENT MENTAL HEALTH

1 in 5 School students suffer from a mental health disorder.

45% of children have had a potentially traumatic experience.

1.1 Million High school students attempt suicide each year.

Students are more likely to seek mental health supports in school than other settings.

SCHOOL PSYCHOLOGISTS ARE TRAINED TO PROVIDE MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES IN SCHOOLS

- Mental Health Assessments
- Counseling & Behavior Support
- Consultation & Referrals

SHORTAGES PREVENT SCHOOLS FROM MEETING STUDENTS' NEEDS

Recommended Ratio 1:500-700

The National Ratio 1:1,382

Shortages Result In:

- Limited access to services.
- Inability to provide preventive and early intervention services.
- Overemphasis on special education compliance.

ADDRESSING THE SHORTAGE OF SCHOOL PSYCHOLOGISTS

- Work towards implementation of the NASP Practice Model.
- Expand capacity by developing partnerships with local universities.
- Increase funding to make salaries competitive and create new positions.
- Reallocate paperwork duties to free up time for prevention and intervention.

School psychologists play a critical role in supporting student mental health and safety.

The Faculty of Arts and the Equity and Diversity Committee present: Diversity and Decolonization in Higher Education in Canada: Leadership Matters

Dr. Malinda S. Smith, Professor of Political Science and Provost Fellow, Equity, Diversity and Inclusion Policy, University of Alberta

Friday, November 29, 2019 / Lecture 10 - 12, followed by lunch 12 - 1 / Senate Room, Hotel Alma

About the speaker:

Dr. Malinda S. Smith is an award-winning scholar specializing in promoting strategies to advance equity, diversity and intersectionality in policies and practices in Canadian institutions. Diversity and decolonization are often seen as competing and even diametrically opposed approaches to transforming persistent inequities in Canadian universities. This talk will explore the two concepts and will argue that critics of diversity on the left and the right of the political spectrum over-state the tension between two necessary pursuits. While a more diverse university is not necessarily a decolonized university, it is necessary for a more inclusive and potentially transformative one. At the same time, a decolonized university is potentially more equitable. The talk will unfold in three parts: first, it will examine the possibilities and limits of approaches to diversity in the academy and why most, to-date, have not been beacons of success; second, it will examine the possibilities and limits of decolonizing contemporary Canadian universities, including the focus on curriculum. Finally, the talk will offer some urgent directions for pursuing a more equitable university through the intersecting pursuits of diversity and decolonization in the contemporary Canadian academy.

The Social, Personality, and Social Development (SPSD) Psychology Research Group meets Mondays from 3:00pm – 4:30pm in Admin 247 to discuss and learn about research being conducted by faculty, students, and affiliates of the University of Calgary.

This week, November 25, 2019, we have the pleasure of having Harrison Boss present research titled “Everybody’s doing it”: Exploring intergroup contact norms as a means to promote intergroup contact behaviour.

Next week, December 2, 2019, we have Lorena Solis present research titled “An Interdisciplinary Approach to Diversity Management: Considering the Intergroup Contact Theory”.

As always, everyone is welcome to attend, and please feel free to bring along anyone else who might be interested!

This conference is aimed at outstanding undergraduates and recent graduates from underrepresented racial/ethnic groups interested in earning their Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology.

Opportunities include:

- Presenting research posters (cash prizes awarded in recognition of best posters)
- Meeting with directors from Clinical Psychology Ph.D. programs
- Attending professional development workshops on the application process
- Receiving individualized feedback on CV
- Networking with future Ph.D. applicants and learning more about life in a Clinical Psychology program.

Unfortunately, CUDCP doesn't have funding to pay for students' lodging or travel, but there will be cash awards and recognition for the best posters presented at the event. Also, to reduce cost, we offer students the possibility of sharing rooms with other attending students. Thank you and please feel free to send any questions our way!

Students,

We would like to invite those of you from underrepresented backgrounds to attend the following event if you are applying or are interested in applying to PhD programs in Clinical Psychology. The Council of University Directors of Clinical Psychology (CUDCP) participates in a networking event every year with the purpose of increasing recruitment of students from underrepresented populations for Clinical Psychology PhD programs. During the event, participants interested in applying to Clinical Psychology PhD Programs have an opportunity to meet and network with directors of Clinical Psychology PhD Programs, as well as present a research poster and attend professional development workshops. This is a fantastic opportunity for students to learn about specific doctoral programs, ask questions, and network with an array of psychologists across the nation. Students who have presented at prior CUDCP Diversifying Clinical Psychology events have had great success gaining admission in the very competitive clinical psychology application process and reported benefitting from the presenting workshops. The next meeting will be on January 17-18, 2020 in Austin, TX. There is no cost associated with registering for this event. Interested students should fill out the online application listed on the flyer. Notifications of acceptance to attend the event will be sent out on a rolling basis. Presenting a research poster at the event is not required but is highly encouraged. Additional information will be emailed to those who register for the event.

Please register by January 8, 2020.
